

Community Economy: A Vision for the Future

Meeting: September 26, 2006

Community Economy went over the slide presentation being developed by Mike and Cassie. Comments were made about missing assets and developable assets. It was also suggested that there be a break down in types of assets to include human and financial capital available as an asset in the Fairbanks and greater area. Time was spent developing the beginning of a vision statement that could be used as future planning. The vision statement would need to include what the desired outcome of Fairbanks is in the future. Attendees decided to select an asset for each meeting and have an “expert” attend the meeting. From those bases, the asset would be analyzed to develop opportunities, required incentives to develop and considerations. The various assets analyzed will be compiled into a portfolio offering insight into future economic development ideas and questions.
